

Accident Investigations

What You Need to Know!

Workplace Safety Webinar Series

Nobody enjoys thinking about how they would investigate an accident, incident or near miss. Unfortunately, these things do happen and conducting a thorough accident investigation is vital to ensure history does not repeat itself.

Like most everything else, preparation and planning are key to ensuring an accident/near miss is promptly investigated and managed from the start to finish.

As a former MNOSHA Investigator, I've been involved with over a dozen fatality investigations and hundreds of serious injury investigations. The absence of a strong safety culture, lack of accountability and ineffective/lack of safety training were at the root of a vast majority of those incidents.

In this webinar, we will:

- Define the difference between incident and near miss
- Discuss what to do at the scene of the accident
- Discuss how to properly interview a witness
- Discuss how to write an incident report
- Look at real life incidents and outcomes
- Identify root causes of accidents
- Outline steps for implementing corrective measures

THE SPEAKERS:

Justin Stevens, Regional Manager and Safety Consultant, Justin leads the safety team that serves the Southern Minnesota region. With over 16 years of workplace safety experience, he is responsible for guiding his team in providing world-class safety services to construction and general industry clients. Prior to joining OECS, he spent time in the private sector as an EHS Manager for Cargill and Safety Manager for Quad Graphics. For 10 years prior to that, he was with MNOSHA as a Senior Safety Investigator, conducting compliance inspections in construction and general industry. Justin is an active member in International Toastmasters working toward his Competent Communicator certification.

Tim Sheehan, president of OECS, is passionate about helping manufacturing and construction firms gain the safety edge so that they can reduce their risk and exposure, while ultimately paying back a healthy return. Prior to OECS, Tim was CEO of LazyDays RV, and spent 30 years at Best Buy in a variety of leadership positions. He is co-owner of OECS with his wife, Chris Naylor, who is also a Certified EOS Implementer for the Traction business growth system.
