Do you know the safety metric used by insurers that can have a powerful impact on your company's bottom line?

Your Experience Modification Rate (EMR) can impact your company's worker's compensation premiums by taking into account the number of claims and injuries in the past and the corresponding costs.

Please join us at our upcoming webinar to understand the importance of your EMR and how this safety metric can make you attractive or unattractive to insurance carriers and contractors, as well as your clients and prospects. Don't let your EMR cost your company money when OECS can help!

This free webinar will:

- Define the EMR and how it can positively impact your company's bottom line.
- Understand the formula used and how to calculate it.
- Determine whether your company has an attractive or unattractive EMR.
- Discuss the issue of workers comp and remote workers.
- Outline numerous ways to improve an EMR.
- Reinforce key factors in maintaining an attractive EMR.
- Set goals to save money and WIN more jobs/bids/sales.

Join us for the inside track from your safety experts!

THE SPEAKERS:

Amy Harwood is a field safety associate with OECS. Prior to joining the company, she served for nearly 30 years in the insurance industry, including 15 years in loss control prevention. Amy is passionate about being proactive, rather than reactive, when encouraging clients to build a safer, more productive and positive workplace. She works with both general industry and construction clients.

Tim Sheehan, president of OECS, is passionate about helping manufacturing and construction firms gain the safety edge so that they can reduce their risk and exposure, while ultimately paying back a healthy return. Prior to OECS, Tim was CEO of LazyDays RV, and spent 30 years at Best Buy in a variety of leadership positions. He is co-owner of OECS with his wife, Chris Naylor, who is also a Certified EOS Implementer for the Traction business growth system.
